John Wilkes Booth began drinking at the Kirkwood House bar in Wash. DC, at 3 PM.

At 4 PM he arrived at Deery's Saloon and ordered a bottle of brandy. Two hours later he was drinking whiskey at TALTAVUL'S Saloon (next door to Ford's Theater?). Having made final arrangements for his impending crime, Booth returned at 9:30 to Taltavul's where Pres Lincoln's valet Charles Forbes, his coachman Francis Burns, and his body guard on alcoholic policemen were all drinking At 10:15, while Parker continued to drink thus leaving the Pres unprotected, Booth left, went next door to Ford's Theater, and shot Lincoln.

Meanwhile George ATZERODT, Booth's fellow conspirator, who was supposed to assassinate Vice Pres. Andrew Johnson had become so drunk and frightened that he abandoned the plan.
